LOCAL NEWS.

SEVERELY BEATEN. - A man named John Baily, supposed to have been drunk, about half past nine o'clock last night, after hanging about the clothing and boot store of Henry Strauss, near the corner of King and Columbus streets, for an hour or so, deliberately walked into the store in which Mrs. Strauss was sitting, eating some crabs, she had just bought from the Summer Garden, and grossly insulted her. She screamed, and her husband, who was near at hand, coming to her rescue, armed with a pistol, at once attacked her assailant, beating him street, closely followed by Mr. Strauss, who continued striking him, until they came to Washington street, where Baily was arrested, and carried to the Watch House, in which he was confined all night. This morning, it was discovered that he had been seriously injured by the beating he had received-so injured as to render him incapable of standing upon his feet. He was conveyed from the Watch House to his boarding house, on Prince street, on a stretcher, and is thought to be dangerously CASES DISMISSED. - In Washington, yester day, Justice Walter dismissed the charge of obtaining money under false pretences against Mr. J. W. Maury, of the firm of Maury & Co. preferred by Wm. Clark. The brother of the complainant testified before the decision was rendered that he did not present the certificate of deposit for payment before the 4th of May, at which time the bank suspended. In Washington, yesterday, the case of Leonard Huyck, president of the Merchants' National Bank charged with having obtained a draft of Mr. Jos. Thornton, on England, for £500 sterling, was to have been heard, it hav ing been for several weeks past postponed from time to time. Neither of the parties, nor their counsel, made their appearance at the Justice' office, and the case was dismissed.

J. A. Stoutenburg auctioneer, sold yesterday for J. B. Hutchinson assignee, the lease of Bowen, Bro. & Co., in and to the extensive flouring mill and wharf, belonging to Messrs. Assault.-Mr. U. H. Painter, of the Philabeaten in the Capitol, at Washington, yesterday, by B. F. Beveridge, formerly of the Capitol police, in a dispute concerning a charge looking for work. Mr. Lyles then told them to against Mr. Sloanaker, collector of internal revenue for the Third District of Pennsylvania, whose confirmation, it is understood, Painter opposed. At a late hour last nigh Mr. P. was suffering severely from his injuries. A committee of the House was appointed to investi gate the case.

THE RECENT MURDER of Mr. Lyles, in Prince George's county; the robbery of Mr. Posey in Charles county, and other reported outrages, near the Potomac river, below this place, have created, naturally enough, great excitement in the lower counties of Maryland, and the citizens there are securing their houses, as if they were in a beseiged country, out of the pale of law, and thrown upon their individual resources to protect themselves from robbery and assassination.

TOURNAMENT AND BALL. - A grand tourna ment is to be held, and a ball given, at Brentsville, Prince William county, Va., on Friday the 20th inst. Large numbers from Prince William and the adjoining counties, are expected to be present. Those who have kept a record of the thermometer say it was the hottest day experienced for many years. The thermometer in usually cool localities was 94 degrees. It reached 103 in the shade in the afternoon.

GOLD. New York, July 18, 1866.—Gold, 1492. THE MURDER OF WILLIAM LYLES.

SHORT HISTORY OF THE MURDERERS.

HE STOLEN MONEY RECOVERED UP TO DATE. William Plaiter, Thomas Davis, William Henry Jones and Henry Luckett, the tour nogro men arrested in this city yesterday, by officers Davis, Padgett and Webster, by order of the Mayor, upon information furnished him by Messrs. Lambert and Marbury, the Cashiers of the Bank of the Old Dominion and Farmers' Bank, of this city, for murdering the late William Lyles, esq., and robbing his wife, are now safely confined in separate cells in the County over the head with the barrel of the pistol, and jail, awaiting a requisition for their rendition to cutting him with a knife. Baily ran down King | the Sheriff of Prince George's county, Maryland-who is now in this city-from the Governor of that State. Three of them, Plaiter, Jones and Davis have acknowledged complicity in the murder and robbery, but assert that Henry Richardson, who is yet at large, was the only one of the party armed with a pistol and is the actual murderer. From the evidence, bearing upon the case, educed by the Mayor in his critical and searching examinations up to this time, the following facts have been elicited. Jones, who was intimately acquainted with his former master's premises, and was aware that Mr. Lyles had a considerable amount of money, among which was a lot of specie, locked up in his secretary, imparted his information to Davis, whose old master lived but a short distance from Mr. Lyles'; the secret was then made known to Plaiter, Richardson and Luckett, and the five together, hatched the plot which has resulted so fatally. Plaiter, on Friday evening last, hired, for

Davis, Jones and Richardson started for the scene of their villainy, but returned in a short time, because Luckett had not met his engagement, and they were afraid he would not prove true. On Saturday evening, however, the whole five were on hand at the appointed time, and started from the ship yard, in the same boat they had the evening before. Going directly across to Susquehanna Creek, and then coasting down the Maryland shore past Fort Foot, where they stopped and got some water, they went as far as the point of the bluff, from which point they recrossed the river to Johnston's Spring, where Plaiter cut a fishing pole. Waiting at this Spring till nearly dark they again took to their boat and crossed the river to the mouth of Piscataway creek, up which they rowed until opposite Mr. Lyles house, when now quite dark. The five then went to within a hundred yards of Mr. Lyles' residence, which consisted of a log shanty, containing a single room-his family mansion having been destroydelphia Inquirer, was assaulted and severely ed by fire during the war-and hailing the house, were answered by Mr. Lyles, who asked what they wanted. They responded they were go to the negro quarters and wait until morning, when, as he had some meadow land he wanted cleared, he would see them and let them know whether they would suit him as laborers. They went to the quarters as directed and wait ed there until about midnight, at which hour they pulled into the shore and landed. It was

they proceeded to the immediate vicinity of the house, and, unitedly, rushing against the door, bursted it open, and four of the five-for Jones, afraid of being recognized, remained on the outside-immediately entering, commenced shooting at Mr. Lyles, who had sprung from his bed as the door fell in. The door, upon being burst open, fell upon a little negro girl, the only occupant of the room except Mr. Lyles and his wife-who was sleeping upon the floor-and she, screaming in her fright, ran out across the yard-one of the party crying out "shoot the d-d b-h." The first ball fired pierced the head of the bedstead, the second went into the wall of the house, but the third, fired close to the head of the murdered man, for his face was blackened with powder, entered his left cheek, just under the eye and passed through his brain. He fell instantly-never spoke after he was shot-and was caught in his fall between the bed post and wall of the house, where he was found the next morning by the neighbors who assembled there at the cries of his wife, with a pistol grasped in his hand and hid by his night shirt. After murdering Mr. Lyles, Davis attempted to strike a match, but not being able to ignite one, Plaiter took Mrs. Lyles by the wrist, and dragged her with him to the negro quarters, where he compelled her to procure him a lamp. He then led her back to the house, but as soon as the key of the secretary, which was lying upon its top, was found, Plaiter released her, and rushing with the others to the open drawers they commenced an indiscriminate plunder of their contents. Mrs. Lyles availed herself of this opportunity to escape, so instantly running out of the house, she hid herself behind a large walnut tree in the yard, where she remained watching the murderers until they left, screening herself by gliding around the body of the tree, so as to keep it between herself and them, as they went off. After ransacking the house,

Mrs. Lyles remained about the yard of the house until day light when, as is stated above, Mr. Lyles was buried on Monday evening last -his remains being escorted to their final resting place in the family grave yard by a large number of the citizens of Prince George's county. His death, but especially the manner of it, has occasioned considerable excitement in the neighborhood of Piscataway, where many assert that no man's life is safe, who is known to own anything of value, while the country, throughout its length and bredth, is daily and nightly prowled over by armed squads of vagabond negroes.

William Plaiter is a large, muscular and well formed negro, of a dark copper color. He is twenty-eight years old, and is about five feet ten inches hight-has a smooth face, and has his woolly hair cut short. He came to this city in 1862 from Chester county, Pennsylvania, where he was born and raised. Shortly after his arrival here he married a negro woman named Iza Wansa—a former slave, who came named Iza Wansa—a former his woolly hair cut short. He came to this city here from Fauquier county, Va, after the breaking out of the war-by whom he has had two children, both now dead, and with whom he lived, when arrested, in a sharty on Gibbon. between Fairfax and Royal streets. He says the last job of work he had was one in the neighborhood of White's Ferry, in Loudoun county, Virginia, where he was engaged as a harvest hand; but his statements are so contradictory, and his memory-good up to this time-has so failed h m since his arrest, that no confidence can be placed in what he says. In his house were found a clock, some socks, and some bed clothing which belonged to Mr. Lyles, besides two gold twenty dollar pieces. Henry Luckett is a stout and thick set negro about twenty two or three years of age, and five feet four inches high. His hair, like Plaiter's, is cut close to his head, nor has he any beard. He formerly was a slave of the Rev. Mr. Blackwell, of Warrenton, from which place he came to this city in 1861, and married here a negro woman named Sarah Gaskins, who belonged to a gentleman residing near Markham Station, on the Manassas Gap Railroad. With his wife and one child he was living in a house on Duke street, between Water and Union, at the time of his arrest. He was employed as a porter in the ship chandler store of D. R. Wilson & Co., at Prince street dock, He is a well spoken negro, and is anxious for the return of his employer, who is out of the city. Upon his person was found a $20 note in Virginia money. Thomas Davis is of a light copper color, wi cropped hair and no beard. He is about nineteen years old, and is near five feet five inches He is unmarried, and was, previous to the war, the slave of Col. Jenkins, of Piscataway, Md. He lived at the time of his arrest on Gibbon street, between Water and Union. Since his arrest he has become exceedingly drowsy-sleeping, apparently, all the time when not engaged by some one in conversation, and even interrupting his answers to questions by frequent and prolonged yearnings. In the house in which his sweet heart lived, in rear of Fairfax street, between Wilkes and Gibbon, was found a sum of money-some specie and some fifty cents, from Mrs. Richard Warder, the Virginia money--which he had left there, say ing, when he left it, "that if he did not call for it again soon she could have it." boat of her husband; in this boat Plaiter,

Henry Richardson is a light brown colored negro, about five feet eight inches high, delicately made and between twenty-five and thirty years of age. He came from Maryland, and lived in one of Seaton's houses on South Washigton street. He was seen yesterday evening by one of the police officers, but managed to escape, and he, it is said, is the one who fired the shot that killed Mr. Lyles.

He had on when last seen a pair of light colored pants and a straw hat. In his house were found thirty dollars in Virginia money, and a hat which belonged to Mr. Lyles.

The police are on the track of Richardson, and hopes are entertained that he will be speedily captured. Between $1,400 and $1,500 of the money has been recovered.

SUDDEN DEATH .- A young Catholic Priest, name unknown, took passage, in Washington, last evening, on the steamer Vanderbilt-the night boat on the Richmond line for Aquia Creek-apparently in perfect health. Before, however, the arrival of the steamer at her destination he was a corpse. His body was brought back to Washington this morning, and placed in charge of the police of that city, who will hold it to await the results of a coroner's

The latest advices state that Prussia and Italy have accepted the proposals for an armistice. The Prussians, however, had advanced further into Bohemia. The Prussians to retain their position; the troops to be supported by the country occupied, and Austria not to increase her armies in the field, and Italy to occupy one Fortress in the quadrilateral. Italy in reply demands two fortresses in the quadrilateral.

A Vienna telegram says there is a good prospect of an armistice for six weeks. Hostilities have not been resumed.
